God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, so that everyone who believes in him might not perish but have eternal life.

More than any other mystery of our shared faith, the Most Holy Trinity is perhaps the most difficult to explain or understand. It is almost incomprehensible for us to comprehend how the one true God can be comprised of three distinct persons: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Even so, theologians throughout the ages have sought to unlock the mystery of the Trinity and to grasp what seems beyond our grasp: a complete understanding of the life and work of God. As mere mortal beings (bound by our smallness, our sinfulness, and our very limited understanding of life on earth), maybe we are not called to understand the Trinity (which is boundless, divine, eternal, and perfect). Maybe we are called only to praise God, to thank God, and to bow low before the awesome power, majesty, and mystery of God. Maybe we are called simply to follow the example of so many saints, like Francis of Assisi, who sought only to love, serve, and worship the Trinity in both word and deed. As small children, we looked up at our parents in awe. They were bigger, taller, and infinitely smarter than us. We looked up to them for care, forgiveness, guidance, and love. As children of God, we should look longingly toward heaven, toward the God whose care, forgiveness, guidance, and love are boundless, endless, and never ending. We should offer our prayers of praise, petition, and thanksgiving for all that God has given us. As children of God, we should seek only to understand that the Creator of Heaven and Earth and Master of the Universe loves us beyond all doubt, beyond all measure, and beyond all sin. This Sunday and every Sunday, let us continue to believe like little children in the Most Holy Trinity. Let us rejoice in the breathtaking love and mystery of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. And let us continue to pray and to serve through prayer, fellowship, and service. EXCERPTED FROM: CCGRONLINE
